TO MERCHANTS, BANKERS, &c.—GUARANTEE FOR FIDELITY.
THE UNITED GUARANTEE and LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY, 26, Old Jewry, London. Capital [illegible] with power to increase to [illegible]
CHAIRMAN.
The Right Hon. the Lord Erskine.
VICE CHAIRMAN.
Joshua P. Brown Westhead, Esq., M.P.
The great superiority of the guarantee of a public company over that of private individuals is now beginning to be understood. It is undeniable, and has lately become more generally known, on account of the disclosures made in the investigation of the late Court-house frauds, that the security offered by persons in situations of trust often becomes practically valueless on account of the death of the sureties, or such a change in their pecuniary circumstances as would render them unable to meet a demand for the amount of the security. The security of a public company conducted under the auspices of responsible directors and with a large number of respectable shareholders, and which business is done at rates of premium the sufficiency and sufficiency of which are guaranteed by the highest actuarial knowledge, based on experience, does not vary from year to year, and dispenses with the necessity of frequent inquiries as to continued life and relevancy.
There is another very great advantage in public as compared with private guarantees, which is not so generally acknowledged, but which is equally real and important.
Private sureties are often induced to take upon themselves the responsibilities of suretyship by feelings of good nature, or to free themselves from the necessity of maintaining those in some degree connected with or dependent on them in the hope that the employment of such persons by means of their surety may at least relieve them from a troublesome applicant for assistance. The security of a public company on the other hand, can only be had after a searching investigation into the connections and previous conduct of an applicant.
In addition to the preceding advantages the Company was the first to offer the great additional security afforded to employers by uniting the principle of life assurance with that of guarantee, and this advantage so far from being attached to the expense of the employed, effects a great saving to them, and is an inducement to their insuring, they have the effect, I would not rather say, to add thus the family of a clerk, out of its premature death, is saved from being dependent on the charity of his employer.
Prospectuses and further information may be obtained upon application to the Secretary, at the Office of the Company, as above, or to any of the Company's Agents.
By order, JAMES KNIGHT, Secretary.

IMPORTANT TO BUILDERS.
THE SEPTENNIAL CYCLICAL PERMANENT MUTUAL BENEFIT BUILDING SOCIETY.—Subscription, 1s. per Share, per week, payable Quarterly or Monthly, that is a cycle of seven years, when a borrower will have absolutely produced to a mortgage and a depositor will, by the joint operation of the weekly and the cyclical distribution, of the subscriptions, obtain 20s. per share, [illegible] with 2s. per share per week, per annum, compound interest added. The peculiar advantages to borrowers, as well as others, are, that they can obtain advances at the rate of 85 per cent. of the actual value of property, [illegible] considerably less interest than on private mortgages; whereas in other building societies the interest paid is always [illegible] and [illegible] from all liability of having their mortgages called in, over the stamp duties and costs of deeds of transference on payment of the mortgages, are at liberty to redeem whenever they please on defined and equally equitable terms, and can also procure loans to the building societies, thus rendering their property much saleable after the mortgage thus before mentioned as a purchaser can either take the same subject to, and have the benefit of the mortgage, or at once redeem it. The advancement for members to borrow is in fact irresistible, and the whole of the principles are such as to afford a ready profitable or perfectly safe and highly remunerative means for the investment of savings by the industrial and middle classes. The rates are extremely liberal and excellent. They have been prepared and settled by gentlemen of great experience in building societies' operations, after the most anxious consideration, and will be found to secure stability in action certainty in results, and equality in the distribution of their manifold advantages amongst all the members, and they have given universal satisfaction. Mr. Scratchley, the eminent actuary, has certified that "he can suggest no further improvements." Prospectuses gratis, with rules, price 2d. per pair, and [illegible] be obtained of WILLIAM TAYLOR, Esq. the Solicitor, at the Office, 9 Adelaide-place, London-bridge; and 18, Circus, Greenwich, of WILLIAM CALDECOTT, Secretary.
